THE PROBLEMS OF RETAIL TRADE.

(No. 6.)

If the merchants can attain a unity like that described in our last article, a town can always make a large expansion. No matter how strenuously the merchants may compete with each other, the total home trade of the town is limited by its population. A business can only get about so far before it runs up against the blank wall created by the limitations of the town's size.

But the opportunity is always open to attract trade from the surrounding country. The free use of automobiles increases this chance amazingly. There are many people with motor cars who are making it a regular practice to trade in towns twenty-five to fifty miles distant, sometimes even more. They are roaming around the country all the time that the roads are good. The women look in the store windows quite as eagerly as at the scenery. The men have an eye for that looks like good business enterprise, too. And there is a constant stream of people who are traveling on the railroads in search of good bargains.

It takes both individual advertising and community co-operation to get this distant trade started. The idea of Merchants' Weeks, trade bargain days, etc., is spreading all over the country. An announcement that all the merchants of a town have agreed to give bargains on a certain day will draw people from many miles around. The visitors are pleased they will come again.

These enterprises are successful when the merchants generally give special bargain values. It is hard for a few of the merchants to do this alone. Every one has to take hold. If the thing is to be made a success.

There are too many merchants who are unwilling to help in such efforts unless they can see a profit coming out of it. Successful expansion of a town is not built up in that way. It is a slow growth, and few new enterprises or trade currents pay the first year. The merchants must take hold with an idea of building for the future, forgetting all grouches and soreness caused by competition. If this spirit prevails, our town will grow, and the people will flock to it from many miles around.

KENTUCKY CARLSBAD SPRING'S FAMOUS MINERAL WATER

This famous water is pumped from the earth 1,100 feet deep. It is a greenish color, entirely free from organic matter with wonderful medicinal properties. Hundreds of cases of rheumatism, Bright's Disease, Catarrh, Diabetes, Stomach, Kidney, Liver and Bladder troubles have met their Waterloo by drinking this water just as it is drawn from the earth.

You can get the same results by drinking it at your home, if it is not convenient for you to come to the springs, as you can get it from your druggist. If he hasn't it, have him order it for you, or you can order it yourself direct from the springs. Understand, it is sold with a GUARANTEE; if you do not get the desired results after you have used it for ten days to two weeks, the one that sold it to you will return you all the money you have paid for it, for all the above mentioned diseases excepting rheumatism. Rheumatic cases must come to the springs to take baths in the same water to get entirely relieved. Our springs are fifty miles north of Lexington on the Q. & C. Railroad. There is some other water being shipped from Dry Ridge which is being palmed off on the public as Carlsbad water, or just as good, but don't you let any druggist or anyone else sell you any water unless the name of KENTUCKY CARLSBAD SPRINGS is on the label. Be sure to write us for one of our free booklets, and then you can see what other people have to say about it. You will find it on sale at

The paths that lead to the marriage altar are of two kinds—the one in which girl retreats in order to be pursued; the other in which the man retreats and must be overtaken. Girls must study their victims in order to know which path to choose.

The worst thing you can do to yourself is to let yourself get too tired.

Nothing succeeds like success unless it is the way failure fails.

You Need a Tonic

There are times in every woman's life when she needs a tonic to help her over the hard places. When that time comes to you, you know what tonic to take—Cardui, the woman's tonic. Cardui is composed of purely vegetable ingredients, which act gently, yet surely, on the weakened womanly organs, and helps build them back to strength and health. It has benefited thousands and thousands of weak, ailing women in its past half century of wonderful success, and it will do the same for you.

You can't make a mistake in taking

CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

Miss Amelia Wilson, R. F. D. No. 4, Alma, Ark., says: "I think Cardui is the greatest medicine on earth, for women. Before I began to take Cardui, I was so weak and nervous, and had such awful dizzy spells and a poor appetite. Now I feel as well and as strong as I ever did, and can eat most anything." Begin taking Cardui today. Sold by all dealers.

Has Helped Thousands.

FORTUNE IN SHIPS AND SHIP BUILDING.

Some 2,200 vessels have been swept from the seas by war—some interned, some sunk. The total tonnage put out of service is already near 4,000,000, and with Britain, France and Italy more occupied in building warships than merchant ships, it is reckoned that if the war ends in a year there will be, even after the interned or sunk vessels are available, a shortage of more than 4,000,000 tons.

For, although American yards are busy at work, they can not fill for sixteen or eighteen months, although they are expanding their plans, while merchant plants are being revived and new ones set up, the 602 ships now under construction in the United States will not be launched within the year. All that will be the void. These vessels now building represent only 1,180,000 tons, and a good deal of it is for our own and other navies. There are only three ships offered in yesterday's hurriedly organized auction and the Marine News, in its free department for bringing buyers and sellers together, lists but twenty-two ships which owners are willing to sell at a fixed price. The pressure of offerings of high prices and a place in America where exchange of gold for ships can be instantly effected will doubtless disclose a larger market as well as test out how far the imperative need of the demand will go in acting romantic rewards upon facilities for ocean carriage.

Here are some typical wonder tales of the enchantment of values in ships within a short period:

Four-masted schooner Jerome Jones, launched the other day from the revived yards at Bath, Me., cost $90,000, already chartered for one voyage at $120,000.

A California firm paid $400 in long distance telephoning to New York to charter an American Hawaiian steamer for a trip to Vladivostok at a rate of $135,000 per month.

Steamer Navajo, built in California five years ago for $250,000, was sold last month for $510,000.

Steamer Jersey, just loaded from Philadelphia for France with flour, will receive $135,000 for the voyage.

Steamer J. Edward Drake, sixteen years old, 789 tons net, offered in October for $25,000, sold in March for $55,000.

Dollos Steamship Company's Mackinaw, sold eight months ago to Flood Brothers for $100,000, lately resold to the Japanese for $300,000.

United States Collier Justice, twenty-five years old, valued at $75,000 before the war, was auctioned by the government at $301,000.

Chilean steamship Gobernador Boves, 3,049 tons, Belfast built, sold six months ago for $62,500, was resold to Norwegians in February for $500,000, and lately again resold to the Japanese for $675,000.

Steamer Doonholm, twenty-three years old, 2,777 tons net, in December, $495,000; in March, $595,000.

Steamship Marie Glaeser, eleven years old, 831 tons net, captured from Germans and auctioned a year ago January at $91,125, has just been resold at $225,000.

Steamship Isle of Arran, twenty-two years old, 1,759 tons register, sold to Norwegians in November for $70,000, just resold to English buyers for $87,500.

Steamship Bernicia (British) seventeen years old, sold for $390,000, chartered for two years at $32,000 a month—that is for the next two years she will almost earn her purchase price each year.

Unfortunately the experience makes a man sadder isn't guaranteed to make him wiser.

Virtue is its own reward. The man who is pleasant lies generally has more friends than the one who persists in disagreeable truths.

TIPS FROM TEXAS

(Dallas News)

A girl who never giggles might as well be a widow.

Our position is that as long as an umbrella remains useful it need not be ornamental.

As a general thing, it is when a girl gets too big for a spanking that she needs it the most.

One trouble about being a little boy is that pretty ladies kiss him before he is old enough to appreciate it.

Personally we never try to beat a man at his own game. It takes all our time to keep from being beaten at our game.

As a general thing, when an old man takes a spiritual adviser it is a sign that he has passed the place where the lawyers could help him.

The Bigger the Task

the greater the demand upon brain and body.

For keeping the mental and physical forces fit, right food is necessary. It must supply certain mineral elements stored by Nature in the field grains, but lacking in much of the food of the usual dietary.

Grape-Nuts

made of whole wheat and malted barley, supplies all the rich nourishment of the grains, including those vital mineral elements which are all-important for building sturdy brain, nerve and muscle.

A MODERN THETIS

By IZOLA FORRESTER.

Judy was nineteen, Judy of Rest Awhile farm, brown haired, brown eyed, freckled, slender and graceful as a silver birch, with all the obstinacy and pertinacity of the Gregorys concentrated in her general make-up.

Judy ran up the worn cow path to the fringe of birchwood and slipped into it, bound for the sculptor's house. Ever since early summer it had been the house of wonder to her, the place where beauty was a real tangible thing, not a vague idea. First she had been sent with eggs and butter and fresh milk to him. His mother had led Judy down the lane to the studio he had made of an old woodshed. Here she had seen him first, working among his beautiful silent figures and after the first few visits he had asked her to let him use her hands for his statue of "Diana Holding a Young Fawn."

"You have perfect hands, Judith," he told her in his absent-minded, impersonal way. "You must let me make casts of them."

Judy nodded understandingly. She had always admired her hands.

"I like them," she said to him. "I don't think it's wrong to like them myself, do you? The rest of me doesn't match them, you see."

Then Whitney had looked at her for the first time, really looked at her slowly, deliberately, with artistic approval.

"I think you're all right," he had said. "I'd like to use your head for my Thetis. It has all of her elusive challenge."

Judy had never heard of Thetis, but in among the old high school books was an old work on mythology, and here Judy read of the elusive lady and her pursuing, changeable wooer, and it delighted her heart. Wooers should pursue, she believed, and should be given a hard chase, not just come along some day when they felt like it and tell one's mother they were willing to marry you the way Hale Tuttle was doing that very afternoon. It had been such a wonderful summer and autumn posing for Thetis' head and Diana's hands and some Egyptian girl who stood among lotus leaves and fed the sacred crocodiles from her perfect hands. She had forgotten all about Hale and his general intentions which had been made manifest toward her for years. Hale just seemed sort of comical when you measured him up beside the Greek gods and Whitney Dewing.

Judy turned breathlessly into the lane to the little house among the maples and hesitated just for a second. A black roadster stood under the trees, and Mrs. Dewing had the tea table out on the veranda. Judy's quick eye saw Whitney strolling back through the lane from the studio with a tall girl in a long gray cloak.

"Come here, Judy, won't you, and join us," called Mrs. Dewing. "You have just seen the statues, Alice, but here is the real, live little Thetis. I don't know what Whitney would have done without her."

Judy smiled, with the Gregory pluck even in defeat. And all at once, as she sat there drinking tea with them all, hearing them make plans for the wedding before Christmas—all at once Judy opened her brown eyes wider than usual and announced:

"I'm going to be married, too. Oh, I've been engaged for years, off and on. No, indeed, the same one," blushing at Whitney's rallying teasing. "He's Judge Tuttle's only son, and—bravely—I've always liked him best of anybody."

"Hale Tuttle?" queried Whitney. "Really, Judith? That big, fine-looking chap with the curly hair who superintended the work on the state road over here?"

Judy nodded proudly. And just then it occurred to her all at once that she had not told Hale yet, that Hale was lingering on back home, waiting for an answer, while she had run away to find the trail of romance, and lo, it only circled around and led back over the cow path through the silver birch wood to Rest Awhile farm, and Hale waiting for her.

"Did you enjoy posing?" Alice asked.

"I did for Thetis," Judy answered happily. "I liked her changing into so many different forms, but she had to be herself at last. I guess we all do. I must hurry back. Hale's waiting for me."

Habit of Promptness.

Once you form a habit of being prompt to meet all your engagements, you will find it just as easy to be prompt as to be tardy. Work conscientiously until the habit is formed—and the whole of your life will be the easier for it.

Occasionally, of course, with the best of intentions delays occur that cause us to keep others waiting. It is always a good plan, therefore, when you are going to meet somebody in a strange place to arrange beforehand that if you are detained you will telephone to some point to which the person you are going to meet can telephone—and so you can let each other know what has happened.

When a young man says a girl has no heart it means she has his.

You can never change your ways until you decide that they need changing. It's dead easy after that.

It may seem funny to tease a child, but when it develops into an ill-natured grown-up, it is not quite so funny.
